Sifting is a very important step in making sure there aren't any clumps. I use a 1/3 cup of 175°F water for every teaspoon or 1 1/2 matcha bamboo scoops for each cup of a matcha latte. We want hot water but not boiling since that can make the matcha really bitter. This is where the electric kettle with temperature control comes in handy.

Matcha, until you are ready to use it, store it in the fridge. Once open, it is too much of a pain to store in fridge because you have to allow it to warm to room temp each time you open the tin. Just use it in 60 days. One more thing, before I put tea in fridge for cold storage, I always add some layers to it.
